REFLECTIONS OF EL: IN SEARCH OF SELF

Outskirts Press, United States, 2011. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 213 x 140 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Even nice people must have a dark side December 1973, Twenty Years Old, The Wall-Part Six (Wrath) I was going to say that it wasn't funny but that could start a conversation. I simply said, I can do this and gave her no eye contact. Regan ran from the room crying again. I realized that Regan had never seen me this focused and direct before. It probably scared her that she had broken something and it couldn't be fixed. Tamara stood there watching this scene, now even more confused. She repeated to me as she squinted and moved her head forward, What happened? You'll have to ask your sister. I have to leave. I could feel Tamara's eyes on my back as I walked to the door. I could hear Regan crying loudly as I closed the door behind me. I knew I would never be seeing that apartment again. I turned to my left and pushed the exit door open so I could go down the stairs. I certainly was not going to wait for the elevator. As I let go of the door it squealed loudly behind me. For a brief moment, I saw my shadow and it was big, like some kind of huge bear. My anger had made me feel powerful in a strange kind of way. As I walked towards the stairs, I passed by the heart on the wall that someone had unsuccessfully attempted to wipe off. There was a satisfaction that I felt that was much stronger than me putting my fist through a wall and seeing red blood on my knuckles. Not only had I...
